

To: DiggingfortheTruth@yahoogroups.com
From: ☺ "dfthost" <dfthost@yahoo.com>  Add to Address Book  Add Mobile Alert
Date: Wed, 14 Feb 2007 22:30:05 -0000
Subject: [DiggingfortheTruth] Happy Valentine's Day - DFT news and more

Honestly, I think that Valentine's Day is a conspiracy between the florists and greeting card companies to bring in a little cash during the bleak month of February. But, alas, it has grown into something that is now, for many, sentimental and significant. So for those who celebrate, I wish you a very happy Valentine's Day. May Cupid's arrow strike swiftly.

I thought I'd send out a "hello" and brief update on all things DFT.

First, the book tour:

It was a pleasure meeting many of you at the various stops along my tour. This was my first book tour and no one was sure if anyone would even show up to hear me speak, sign books, etc. Thankfully, the power of DFT prevailed and we set records at many of the places I spoke, even selling out all books at a couple of stores. Wow. So my thanks to all who came, and to those of you who brought gifts and other tokens of appreciation. Very generous of you.

The tour, overall, went very well and my appearances on the Daily Show and the Today Show were a huge hit. For those who care, Jon Stewart is just as witty in person and Norah Jones is a sweetheart. [You didn't see this, but after my interview with Meredith Vieira, I stayed for a few minutes and sat on the couch with Matt Lauer, Meredith, and Harry Connick, Jr. (not sure why he was there) and we listened to Norah Jones sing from her new album. I then got to chat with her for a bit.]

With the close of the book tour, it's now up to the readers of the book to spread the word and help sales move forward. I hope you can assist.

In terms of the big "Season 4" question for DFT, I haven't heard anything yet regarding the show's future, but that's not unusual. The network has historically decided in March and I'll keep you posted on that front should I learn anything. But the first 4 episodes have done very well and I'm excited to see the remaining 8. "Dr. Zahi" is back in two of them. "Zsosh..."

Some have asked me if I am doing "Josh's Journal" this season. No, sadly, I'm not. As I explained during the book tour, I decided instead to write the book, do the book tour, and contribute to the DFT webisodes you see on THC's website and on the DVD sets. I have only so much time and energy and decided the other things were more important.

And, finally, regarding the DVD box sets... Season 2 is now officially available. I just got mine and think die-hard fans will love the collective edition and the interview with me they threw in as a Special Feature on Disc 4. Good stuff.

So that's the latest here. Again, best wishes for a happy V-Day.

In adventure,
josh

ps. Someone just emailed me regarding some of the "unofficial Josh Bernstein fan sites" on the internet. Apparently, they're closing down/freezing. Not sure what that's about, but take heart - I'm now planning to launch an official JB site, summer '07. Stay tuned!