Josh Bernstein, of the History Channel's Digging for the Truth series, invites Bubba and Eric Dufour for his second powered paragliding episode, Searching for the Lost Colony of Roanoke!

The weather was foggy, but began to clear about an hour later. Josh and I ascended through tattered wisps of these ground clouds and were able to get a bird's eye view of the area. What impressed me most was how many directions the colonists could have gone and how terribly thick the vegetation was. It would have been a very slow and arduous trek in any direction. DNA samples were taken from the local Indians and from the descendants of the original colonists to see if they are related. You'll have to watch the show or buy the DVD to find out what the results were.

Is this cool or what!

JWM Productions is doing a thirteen part series for the History Channel and invited me, Bob "Bubba" Peters to fly for them. What a treat! I'm hoping they'll ask for me to fly in more exotic places as they continue "Digging for the Truth" around the world.
